once have we felt it our duty to notice the pro-gresss of this Institution. It was not to be ex-pected that our establishment, which contem-plates results so far above the school or general college, and which is confined to the more ma-tured student, would speedily értablish itself in so young a city as Chicago. All beniesee men who could comprehend the result aimed at, and in other cities seared by a thorough Con-mercial College, rejoiced when Judge Rell as-nounced his intention, now more than twangears ago, to establish such an Institution. It was felt, however, that time would be required before it could be properly appreciated, and its benefits realised by society. At an earlier period, how-ever, than could have been expected, the Chica-cago Commercial College has fairly accurated the cago Commercial College has fairly scerred the attention and confidence, not only of the business men of the city, but of a large class of young men in our own and the surrounding Stat who for the past year and at the present the are resping the benefits of the Institution. Many young near of a good scholastic educ-tion, reliable and second tions, have felt the insufficiency of ordinary training for bosinese purposes, at the school or the college. Though they may have learned a theory of book keeping, they find themselves peratically ignorant of the principal branches of a city. The merchants of the city have confidence in the College, and to have graduated there is a circum resonmendation. Young men from the surrounding country, who have had but a partial business closation, would increase their value to an employer considerable by such a course of study. Not less would it benefit any man who is about commencing business for himself; indeed, there are few who, whatever be their position in life, would not be incadentably benefitted by passing through a collipate course. The knowledge imparted is not limited to one branch, it is thorough and consprehensive—fitting a man to enter upon all the duties which any business may require. NEW YOR
